

Use EUSTEPs tools to boost sustainability teaching in 2021

Dear EUSTEPs friend,

We find you today, January 29, just in time to present you with our warmest wishes for the New Year. On our end, we intend for 2021 to be a productive year, as all of us keep navigating the pandemic-related constraints and uncertainties. We're especially excited to kick off the year by sharing tools that we believe can support you as you engage deeper with sustainability teaching over the coming months.

Watch EUSTEPs 1st Multiplier Event

This week, some 80 educators from around the world joined the EUSTEPs faculty members to learn about the EUSTEPs teaching module. Did you miss it? Watch the video recording, share it with your colleagues, and send us your questions or comments.

The teaching material for the EUSTEPs module is now available for free download in English, Greek, Italian and Portuguese on our website. Choose your language, sign up, and download away. Get started.

Enjoy the EUSTEPs Literature Review

We got busy at the close of 2020 as we strived to publish our first EUSTEPs eBook. This eBook explores how environmental and sustainability education has evolved over time, and provides a review of initiatives around the world focusing on integrating sustainability teaching in Higher Education Institutions. Check it out.

Get inspired by one of our students

The academic path of Sara Galentino was shaped by her discovery of the Ecological Footprint. After she took the EUSTEPs module pilot session last spring at the University of Siena, she could not ignore that her world view had shifted. Watch the video.
